ISRAELI FIRM HELPING FBI TO OPEN ENCRYPTED IPHONE: REPORT

1 Israel's Cellebrite, a provider of mobile forensic software, is helping the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation's attempt to unlock an iPhone used by one of the San Bernardino, California shooters, the Yedioth Ahronoth newspaper reported on Wednesday. If Cellebrite succeeds, then the FBI will no longer need the help of Apple Inc, the Israeli daily said, citing unnamed industry sources. Cellebrite officials declined to comment on the matter. Apple is engaged in a legal battle with the U.S. Justice Department over a judge's order that it write new software to disable passcode protection on the iPhone used by the shooter.

UNITED STATES TO PRESS RUSSIA ON SYRIA'S ASSAD

2 Secretary of State John Kerry is expected to press Russian President Vladimir Putin on how Russia sees a future political transition in Syria and the fate of President Bashar al-Assad. With a fragile truce in place in Syria and warring sides attending peace talks in Geneva, Kerry wants to "get down to brass tacks" on the question of Assad's future, a State Department official said. While the United States want Assad to step aside, Russia says only the Syrian people can decide his fate at the ballot box and has bristled at any talk of regime change. Kerry is holding talks with Putin at the Kremlin on Thursday, in a meeting arranged after the Russian leader's surprise announcement on March 14 that he was partially withdrawing his forces from Syria. "The Secretary would like to now really hear where President Putin is in his thinking ... on a political transition" in Syria, the official said as Kerry arrived in Moscow. REUTERS

SUPREME COURT FACES 4-4 SPLIT IN OBAMACARE CONTRACEPTION CASE

3 The Supreme Court on Wednesday headed toward a possible 4-4 split over a legal challenge by Christian nonprofit employers who object to providing workers insurance covering birth control as required by President Barack Obama's healthcare law. An evenly split ruling, with the court's four liberals siding with the Obama administration against the four conservative justices, would leave in place lower-court rulings rejecting challenges brought by the Christian organizations that opposed providing contraception coverage for religious reasons.

MBTA riders unafraid after Brussels attacks

Routines go on as usual as security enhanced at city transit hubs.

SPENCER BUELL
spencer.buell@metro.us

Cities around the world stepped up security at major transit hubs in the wake of terrorist attacks Tuesday on an airport and metro station in Brussels.

Boston was no different, as Logan Airport brought in an enhanced police presence and the MBTA dispatched additional uniformed officers to its stations. That continued on Wednesday.

"Out of an abundance of caution, MBTA personnel and police continue their stepped up vigilance and visibility around the transit system," T spokesman Joe Pesaturo said Wednesday.

A message urging riders to report unusual activity is also being sent out systemwide, Pesaturo said.

So with tensions especially high, we asked commuters on Wednesday whether they felt safe riding the T.

"I'm aware, but I feel pretty safe. It doesn't mean that I'm not aware that it could happen here, but I don't spend a lot of time thinking about it or worrying about it."

Len Gosule, 72, Stoughton

"I mean you've got to use public transportation, so it might be a little bit more scary, but you have to use it. You don't really have a choice. I just have to cross my fingers, I guess."

Adelyn Graf, 21, Wilton, Connecticut

"If lightning is going to strike, it's going to strike. It happened at the marathon, so you can't say it couldn't happen around here, but it's just not my personality. You could get hit by a truck crossing the street, but you still have to cross the street."

Giant inflatable flower breathes life into spring

A massive inflatable flower bloomed at the Museum of Fine Arts Boston on Wednesday as the institution welcomed a larger-than-life installation on its Huntington Avenue lawn. South Korean artist Choi Jeong Hwa's "Breathing Flower," which is almost 20 feet wide, was installed Wednesday afternoon. Its long petals in the shape of a lotus flower "will gently move and glow from within," according to a release from the museum. The flower is part of an exhibition from Asian artists called "Megacities Asia." The roster of works featured include pieces from celebrated Chinese provocateur Ai WeiWei. MassArt evac after bomb threat at MCPHS

Students lined the street after the college reportedly received threats via email.

A bomb threat at MCPHS University led to an evacuation at Massachusetts College of Art and Design on Wednesday.

According to police, MCPHS received a bomb threat via email at 11:13 a.m. Bomb squads cleared the building shortly after and found there were no threats inside the building, said spokeswoman Myeshia Henderson.

The official Twitter account for MassArt tweeted at 11:35 a.m. that a suspicious package had been found at MCPHS, but Henderson said the school must have had the wrong information.

"There is a suspicious device found at MCPHS please evacuate Kennedy Building at this time. Palace Road is shut down," MassArt tweeted.

The school tweeted an all-clear at 11:55 a.m.

Livestreaming footage on Fox 25's website showed police and dogs surveying the area before students filed back into the building.

The reaction comes a day after terror attacks in Brussels put cities around the world on high alert.

Mass. Statehouse holds moment of silence for Brussels victims

State lawmakers at an event celebrating the cultural ties between France, Canada and Massachusetts paused Wednesday morning to pay respects to the victims of a terrorist attack in Brussels.

A pair of bombs exploded Tuesday morning at an airport in Belgium followed by another explosion at a metro station, killing at least 30 people.

Joining dignitaries from Canada, Switzerland and France, Sen. Linda Dorcena Forry and Reps. Paul Brodeur and Denise Provost expressed solidarity with the people of Brussels and took part in a moment of silence at the beginning of ceremony promoting the development of the French language hosted by Francophonie Nouvelle-Angleterre.

"As we stand with all those affected and impacted by these atrocities — we pray for the victims and their families because even though we're here there is an impact to us, too," said Forry, who took part in organizing the event along with Senate Minority Leader Bruce Tarr's office.

An aide to Sen. Tarr said the ceremony was scheduled before the attacks. SHNS

Cambridge shooting leaves one dead and two injured

A shooting in Cambridge has left one injured and another dead, WHDH reported. The incident occurred Tuesday around 10 p.m. when police responded to reports of gunfire in the area of Mount Auburn Street.

Police found two men at the scene. Both were taken to a nearby hospital where one died and the other was being treated for his serious injuries.

"A short distance away, police found a vehicle in flames on Coolidge Road outside a cemetery. Officials said it is not clear whether the fire is related to the shooting," WCVB reported. Police are investigating the incident. MATTHEW LEE

Mass. hospitals are seeing surge in heroin-related visits

Opioid-related hospital visits are "skyrocketing" in Massachusetts, with heroin-related visits jumping by 201 percent between 2007 and 2014, according to Health Policy Commission figures discussed Wednesday.

Opioid-related hospital visits have increased from around 30,000 in 2007 to more than 55,000 in 2014, with non-heroin opioids accounting for the bulk of the trips, an analysis by the commission found.

"These are not deaths," said Katherine Record, the commission's deputy director of Behavioral Health Integration and Accountable Care. "These are patients who had successful health care intervention … and the rate of those patients, is skyrocketing, as you can see."

Record said there has been "huge growth" in heroin-related hospital visits. "Heroin has gotten cheaper and more accessible, and as we clamp down on the availability of pills, which is a good thing, it does force patients to turn to heroin, so we need to be thinking about that as well as prescription control," she said.

Preliminary findings from the analysis, presented at a meeting of the commission's Quality Improvement and Patient Protection Committee, showed the rate of hospital visits varies significantly across the state, with Pittsfield, Holyoke, Springfield, Worcester, Boston, Lynn and Leeds, a village in Northampton, representing "hot spots" with higher rates of opioid-related inpatient admissions.

"It is everywhere," Health Policy Commission Executive Director David Seltz said. "It's just a particular problem in some of the communities, and I think that lines up with what we know."

Baker NICOLAUS CZARNECKI

According to the Department of Public Health, the 1,099 confirmed cases of unintentional opioid overdose deaths in 2014 represented a 65 percent increase over the 668 overdoses in 2012 and a 21 percent increase over the 911 overdose cases in 2013.

Curbing the rising rates of opioid addiction and overdose throughout the state has been a focus of policymakers, with the signing of an addiction prevention and education law on March 14 coming as the latest step. The bill, which Gov. Charlie Baker called "the most comprehensive measure in the country to combat opioid addiction," includes measures that limit new opiate prescriptions to seven days, allow a patient to receive a lesser-than-prescribed amount of a drug, and require evaluations of emergency room patients presenting with overdose symptoms.

Earlier this week, Baker said he wanted to see the federal government invest in researching and supporting the best way to treat addiction and support people in recovery. SHNS

US to charge Iranians in dam cyberattacks

The charges, related to unlawful access to computers and other alleged crimes, were expected to be announced publicly by U.S. officials as soon as this morning, a sources said.

The Obama administration is expected to blame Iranian hackers as soon as Thursday for a coordinated campaign of cyberattacks in 2012 and 2013 on a suburban New York City dam and several other targets, sources familiar with the matter have told Reuters.

In one of the largest foreign cyberattack cases since 2014 when the United States charged five Chinese military hackers, the U.S. Justice Department has prepared an indictment against about a half-dozen Iranians, said four sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity due to the sensitivity of the matter.

The hackers who were expected to be named in the indictment all reside in Iran, one source said. GETTY IMAGES

The indictment was expected to directly link the hacking campaign to the Iranian government, one source said.

Though the breach of back-office computer systems at the Bowman Avenue Dam in Rye Brook, New York has been reported, it was only part of a hacking campaign that was broader than previously known, as the indictment will show, the sources said.

In the intrusion of the dam computers, the hackers did not gain operational control of the floodgates, and investigators believe they were attempting to test their capabilities.

The dam breach coincided roughly with attacks on U.S. financial institutions. Cybersecurity experts have said these, too, were perpetrated by Iranian hackers against Capital One, PNC Financial Services and SunTrust Bank. Prosecutors were considering including those breaches in the indictment, sources said.

The Justice Department declined to comment.

The indictment would be the Obama administration's latest step to confront foreign cyberattacks on the United States. REUTERS

US on alert after Brussels attacks

Atlanta's airport was briefly evacuated Wednesday over a suspicious package while U.S. law enforcement agencies and travelers were on edge a day after deadly suicide bombings by Islamist militants rocked Brussels.

Passengers were ordered out of public areas of the domestic terminal at Hartsfield-Jackson International Airport, the United States' busiest by passenger volume, but the site was quickly cleared and operations resumed, airport officials said.

Parts of Denver airport were also evacuated on Tuesday, hours after at least 31 people were killed and 260 wounded in attacks on Brussels airport and a rush-hour metro train, as airports across the United States tightened security.

U.S. officials were trying to find Americans missing after the attacks, which the officials said injured about a dozen U.S. citizens including three Mormon missionaries, a U.S. Air Force airman and four members of his family.

Denver International Airport

"We are still assessing the impact," U.S. State Department spokesman Mark Toner said in a statement. He could not confirm whether any Americans were killed.

"We must emphasize that a number of U.S. citizens remain unaccounted for," Toner said. REUTERS

BRIEF

US House bill targets care of babies born dependent on opioids

A bill that aims to protect babies born to mothers who used heroin or other opioids during pregnancy was introduced on Wednesday in the House as part of the government's response to a Reuters investigation.

The bipartisan measure would require federal and state governments to do a better job of monitoring the health and safety of babies born drug-dependent. Last week — and also in response to the Reuters investigation — a similar bill moved to the Senate floor and the U.S. Health and Human Services Department pledged reforms.

"We must do everything we can to safeguard the most vulnerable among us," Rep. Lou Barletta, a Pennsylvania Republican, said in a statement on Wednesday. Barletta is the bill's prime sponsor.

Reuters found that 110 U.S. children who were exposed to opioids while in the womb later died preventable deaths at home — and that thousands more each year do not receive social supports required by a 2003 law. The news agency also found that no more than nine states comply with this law, which calls on hospitals to alert social workers whenever a baby is born dependent on drugs.

The House bill would require states to report each year the number of infants identified as born drug-dependent, and the number for whom plans of safe care are developed.

The bill also calls for the distribution of "best practices" to social workers developing plans of safe care for the newborns and their caretakers. REUTERS

Trump, Clinton win big in Ariz., but Cruz, Sanders show fight

The win furthered Trump's argument that he will eventually win the Republican presidential nomination and that the party should rally around him. He won all of Arizona's 58 delegates.

Republican front-runner Donald Trump swept to victory in Arizona on Tuesday but rival Ted Cruz showed some fight with a win in Utah that gave hope to establishment Republicans who fear Trump would lead the party to ruin in the presidential election.

On the Democratic side, favorite Hillary Clinton routed challenger Bernie Sanders in Arizona to stretch her advantage in the race for her party's presidential nomination.

Sanders, however, won contests in Utah and Idaho to bolster his case that he still has a chance despite Clinton's big lead.

The nominating battles in Arizona and Utah, plus the Democratic contest in Idaho, were overshadowed by attacks in Brussels in which at least 30 people were killed and raised security concerns among U.S. voters.

Trump helped himself in Arizona with a hardline anti-immigration message and tough talk on Islamic militants to easily defeat Cruz, a senator from Texas, and Ohio Gov. John Kasich.

Trump had the backing in Arizona of Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio, one of the most prominent supporters of a crackdown on illegal immigrants.

"Much bigger win than anticipated in Arizona. Thank you, I will never forget!" Trump said on Twitter. "Hopefully the Republican Party can come together and have a big WIN in November, paving the way for many great Supreme Court Justices!"

Cruz, though, won big in Utah's caucuses, giving hope to those Republicans who fear Trump's proposal to deport 11 million illegal immigrants and build a wall on the U.S. border with Mexico would guarantee a Democratic victory in the Nov. 8 election.

Cruz appeared to be on track to win all of Utah's 40 Republican delegates. Since the state's 40 delegates are awarded proportionate to the popular vote, he needed to win at least 50 percent of the vote to take all the delegates.

He appeared to benefit from Mormons who dominate the Republican vote in Utah. They did not take kindly to a Trump attack on Church of Latter Day Saints member Mitt Romney, the 2012 Republican nominee who has led the anti-Trump opposition.

Trump had questioned whether Romney, an elder in the Mormon church, was really a Mormon.

"Trump's poor showing in Utah is a reminder that while many love his glib comments, those remarks can also have a downside. Questioning Mitt Romney's faith is something that was sure to backfire in Utah," said David Yepsen, director of the Paul Simon Public Policy Institute at Southern Illinois University.

Clinton seized on the Brussels attacks to argue that neither Trump nor Cruz can be trusted to lead the fight against Islamic State militants.

Trump has called for a temporary ban on Muslims entering the U.S. and Cruz said he would send police patrols into Muslim neighborhoods.

Sanders said his Utah and Idaho victories were powered by young people and working-class Americans who support his "political revolution."

"These decisive victories in Idaho and Utah give me confidence that we will continue to win major victories in the coming contests," he said. REUTERS

In "Batman v Superman," Amy Adams once again plays ace reporter and Clark Kent's crush, Lois Lane. WARNER BROS. PICTURES

THE FUN STARTS HERE

Amy Adams is in no rush to get her Oscar

The actress tells us about reprising Lois Lane for "Batman v Superman" and not caring about awards.

NED EHRBAR
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

With "Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice," Amy Adams gets her second crack at playing comic book icon Lois Lane, who she first played in 2013's "Man of Steel." Apart from getting to see Ben Affleck's incarnation of the Caped Crusader, the five-time Oscar-nominated actress, 41, learned a few new things — like the fact that Superman's stomping grounds of Metropolis and Batman's Gotham are actually quite close to each other, geographically speaking.

I didn't realize Gotham and Metropolis were so close.
Yeah, I didn't either. I remember [director] Zack [Snyder] trying to explain to me when we were shooting certain scenes, and I'm like, "Where is this?" And he's like, "It's here." So it's across the parking lot in my world, but on a green screen.

Have you gotten used to that yet as an actor — the amount of green screen?
I just did a film called "Story of Your Life" [the forthcoming film from fashion designer-turned-director Tom Ford] and I was literally just talking to a green screen for a lot of the movie. I feel like as an actor it's my job to create a world that doesn't exist, except in the world that we're living in and creating. So it's just another element that you add to it.

It just seems like a skill they didn't emphasize as much 10 years ago.
No, I don't really think they teach acting to a tennis ball in colleges or universities. They probably should add that to the acting program.

A recent poll decided that now that Leonardo DiCaprio has an Oscar, you're the next on the list of actors people feel are due.
Really? Oh gosh. I have a list. I can think of some people [more deserving]. Annette Bening, Glenn Close … but that's nice, that's very nice.

We could get a campaign started for you.
I don't think about it. I sort of conceded a long time ago that it probably wouldn't happen, just given the odds. That hasn't been part of my motivation. I wouldn't give it back if they gave me one, but I don't poo-poo the whole idea of it. It's just if I spent time thinking about it, that seems like something petty to feel sorry for myself about.

How great would it be if they announced a winner at the Oscars and the person was like, "No, I'm good"?
"Uh, yeah, no. That wasn't really my best work." Can you imagine? "I think someone else did better work, I think we all know who that person is, I'd like to give it to them." I don't think that that's happened.

You could be the first.
No, I wouldn't do that. I wouldn't tackle someone to get to the stage, but I'm not gonna … no.

Allison Williams knows you don't like Marnie

But she hopes she can change your mind.

RACHEL RACZKA
@rachelraczka
rachel.raczka@metro.us

The characters on HBO's "Girls" have always been polarizing, but tightly wound, type A Marnie Michaels might be the easiest target. And Allison Williams knows this.

"Marnie always tries to be better and do better, but never wants to get caught being the problem," says Williams from the Alabama set of her upcoming film "Get Out." "I think at her core she is a perfectionist, but she's far, far less than perfect.

Season 5 opened with Marnie fulfilling the bridezilla cliche we knew she would, while a panicked Desi was talked down from bailing by Ray. The relationship unfolds to be as challenging as anyone might expect it to be, but Marnie soldiers on, determined to make it work. This weekend's episode "The Panic in Central Park" is a special capsule centered on Williams' character — the details are scarce, but the 27-year-old actress, insightful and charismatic and un-Marnie-like in every way, fills us in on what to expect.

We spoke to Alex Karpovsky [Ray] a few weeks ago, and he says that like his character, Marnie is also a true romantic. What do you think?
I think he's probably right. She has, in many ways, the highest standards and hopes for what love could be. She's gone back and forth between believing she deserves it or not. It's so different from the marriage her parents had, but she still feels like great love is possible and she follows her instincts in that direction often. A lot of the decisions she makes are governed by that sense of romance. I think Ray is probably up there somewhere with the rest of them, too.

We don't know much about your capsule episode, so is there anything you can tell us?
We get to spend a chunk of time with Marnie and see the result of a fight she gets into with Desi. Richard Shepard directed masterfully, and I was so excited when I found out Lena [Dunham] was thinking about [a Marnie] capsule episode. It's such a privilege and it shows so much trust from [Lena]. Just to shoot it was formative and I hope people enjoy watching it, even if Marnie drives them nuts.

That's the sad thing about Marnie — she almost seems purposely unlikable, but she's also the character that most actively tries to be better.
She has an edge to her and a little bit of a bite that I don't think is intentional. She comes off harshly sometimes and isn't cautious or artful when she needs to be the most, which I think rubs people the run way. But she's pretty serious about feeling love for someone who is also serious, even when there are more fun options to have.

Eh, I like Marnie.
There's growing sympathy for her and this season will deepen that. Hopefully people getting to spend a whole episode with her will [help them] understand her better.

Marnie's "Girls" capsule episode "Panic in Central Park" airs Sunday at 10 p.m. on HBO. MARK SCHAFER

Argentinean-Swedish singer-songwriter José González cheers up

A.D. AMOROSI
letters@metro.us

As a moody Argentinean kid born in Sweden and raised on records by Joy Division, Nick Drake and Elliot Smith, José González didn't have much chance but to be a quietly insular and quivering singer-songwriter of melancholy words and music. Even when he turned his attention to rock as a teen, it was sad in nature.

Intimate, skeletal albums such as 2005's "Veneer" and 2007's fleshed-out "In Our Nature," found González inward looking, forlorn and angrily navel-gazing with the occasional hat tip to political song like, "How Low." After 2007, he spent time in bands such as Junip and Göteborg String Theory. Perhaps socializing as such opened him up, as González became more outward looking in his lyrics — cheerier even — for 2015's "Vestiges & Claws," and presumably, his current tour.

You had a seven-year gap between solo albums that ended with "Vestiges & Claws." What did you learn from being in bands that you brought back to your personal work?

When I started working on the new album, I found myself returning often to its demos, even though I had learned a lot from working as Junip. I went old school. I actually felt more comfortable when I had a song that sounded too simple, even empty. I could truly produce something from that start point — what instruments to add, what additional structure I could give it. Mixing, too. So, yes I felt comfortable with all the production tricks I learned from those situations but still chose still to keep "Vestiges & Claws" sketchy and simple — raw, even.

The new album's vibe is so different from what we're used to lyrically from you, which is usually something more insular. The new album is more outward, filled with big universal love.

It's definitely a conscious effort to open up. Since my first album, I have been struggling with the monotony of my guitar playing and the emotions of my lyrics, often sad and melancholy. Those are first-person narratives. Even when my music was soft, there was aggression and frustration. I have been trying to move from that, so not to be a whining singing-songwriter. I was always looking for more things to sing about — society, humanity. This time those topics with lots of metaphors came out, another sort of narrative. This is, for me, one step further.

Music doesn't have to be a direct reflection of how one feels or which relationships the author happens to exist in. What cheered you up?

I am just more comfortable. There are other subjects to sing about than myself and my relationships. I have been trying to do protest songs and political songs, like the ones from when I was young. I like how Rodriguez talks about the working classes or how John Lennon imagines one world. I think about those ideas a lot now, so that comes out.

Best bets for Easter brunch

Whether you're dining with wee ones or going high-brow, we've got options.

LINDA CLARKE
letters@metro.us

It's Easter weekend, which means you need brunch reservations. Read on to find the best spots for noshing with family in the 'burbs, dining with pals or treating the kids.

Meet the Easter Bunny

At Aragosta Bar + Bistro on the waterfront in the North End, the Easter Bunny is on hand during the buffet, which includes a children's selection and a bloody mary or mimosa for adults. At noon, an egg hunt is followed by a harbor cruise. (9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. $55 adults, children $12.95. Reservations required. 877-794-6218. www.batterywharfhotelboston.com).

The big white rabbit also appears at Bastille Kitchen's brunch, where there's an Easter egg hunt and homemade Peeps. The a la carte menu boasts buttery bacon-pecan caramel French toast; quiche Lorraine with North Country bacon, leeks and Gruyere; and a duck confit omelet with truffle marrow butter and endive salad. (10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. 617-556-8000. www.bastillekitchen.net).

Sophisticated (no sweatpants!) Easter brunch

In Harvard Square, Parsnip Restaurant and Lounge's three-course prix fixe includes sole with wilted spinach, ginger and scallop butter sauce; gnocchi with pecorino cheese and truffles; and Cornish hen with wild mushrooms, pearl onions and pancetta. ($70. 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. 617-714-3206. www.parsniprestaurant.com).

Bar Boulud's prix fixe includes roasted leg of lamb with fava beans, ricotta cavatelli with pancetta and the signature Gateau Basque, a traditional Basque custard cake with brandied cherries and creme Anglaise. Jazz musician Andrew Smith will knock out a few tunes, and children receive a chocolate bunny pop to take home! (11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. $55 adults, $25 children. 617-535-8800. www.barboulud.com/boston)

Late risers' club

Precinct's all-day Easter brunch includes hors d'oeuvres and dessert buffets, and an entrée of your choice. There's sage roasted chicken with brioche-raisin stuffing, rosemary-mustard leg of lamb with Cabernet-garlic jus or pan seared Acadian red fish with lemon, fennel and tomato relish. (11 a.m. to 6 p.m. $64 adults, $25 children under 10. 617-532-3827. www.precinctkitchenandbar.com)

Doretta's Greek influenced, family-style prix fixe brunch is served Easter Sunday and Greek Easter Sunday, too (May 1). The meal includes dips with grilled bread; appetizers like grilled octopus; a choice of fish or lamb with lemon potatoes and string beans. (Noon to 7 p.m. $59 adults, $25 children 12 and under. 617-422-0008. www.dorettaboston.com)

Brunch in the 'burbs

In Newton, Lumiere opens its doors especially for an a la carte brunch with choices like lobster omelet with black truffles and pea tendrils; French toast with Chantilly crème fraîche and apricot compote; and zesty Gloucester haddock with watercress, grapefruit and roasted fennel. (11 a.m. to 2 p.m. 617-244-9199. www.lumiererestaurant.com)

Chopps American Bar and Grill, a hidden gem in the Burlington Marriott, is going all out with a brunch buffet in its renovated Grand Ballroom. Breakfast favorites like eggs benedict and frittatas are paired with brown sugar brûléed Maine ham served with pineapple chutney, and sea salt-roasted Pineland Farms strip loin au poivre with horseradish cream and chimichurri. A children's buffet is also available. (10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. $59 adults, $19 children under 12, complimentary for children under 3. Tax and gratuity included. (781-221-6643. www.choppsamericanbarandgrill.com).

5 Ultimate things to do in Paris

Find your way in the city of lights.

Fodor's Travel

With so much to see and do in Paris, it's hard to narrow it down to the essentials while still experiencing a bit of everything it has to offer. We've selected the crème de la crème of the city, mixing in the classics with some off-the-beaten-path gems to help you plan a weekend, a longer trip or even your next few visits. Most of all, the sites listed here make up le vrai Paris and are sure to provide a memorable — and authentic — experience.

Ile Saint-Louis

Just behind the Notre-Dame gardens, the Pont Saint-Louis pedestrian bridge leads to the atmospheric streets and lively shopping of the Ile Saint-Louis. A perfect walk for flaneurs just taking in the majestic facades and quiet courtyards of beautiful 17th-century mansions, this peaceful island is truly an oasis. Enjoy traditional Parisian fare at the Brasserie de l'Isle Saint-Louis or sample one of the 90 scrumptious flavors of handmade, all-natural ice creams and sorbets in flavors such as wild strawberry, noisette, rum raisin and white chocolate at Bertillon, Paris' most famous ice-cream maker.

Musée Rodin

Once the great sculptor's studio, this stately 18th-century mansion is one of Paris' most beautiful museums and contains more than 6,000 of Rodin's sculptures, including his great masterpieces "The Thinker," "The Kiss," "The Burghers of Calais" and "The Gates of Hell," along with 8,000 drawings and gouaches. The lovely grounds of the Musée Rodin, complete with a fountain, rose gardens and a pleasant outdoor café make for a delightful afternoon outdoors. The museum also hosts special exhibitions and a cycle of exhibits on contemporary works. Following three years of renovations, the museum fully reopened in November.

Video mapping is used to display a projection on the Hotel Sale, which houses the Picasso Museum in Paris.

Palais-Royal Gardens

Far from the noise and bustle, these serene formal gardens and elegant shops tucked behind the walls of a 17th-century palace are a delightful haven and one of Paris' best-kept secrets. Once a royal residence, the hushed arcades and manicured gardens of the Palais-Royal are now home to world-class perfumers, antiquaires and designer boutiques including Rick Owens and Stella McCartney, as well as two of France's most important glove makers, Maison Fabre and Lavabre Cadet. Enjoy lunch or teatime outdoors or splurge like Zola, Proust and Colette did at the gorgeous Grand Véfour restaurant. Afterward, explore the lovely Jardin des Tuileries.

Louis Vuitton Foundation

Rising up out of the Bois de Boulogne like a magnificent ship with billowing crystal sails, Frank Gehry's contemporary art museum and cultural center is the most captivating addition to the Parisian skyline since the Centre Pompidou in 1977. Commissioned by Bernard Arnault, chairman and CEO of luxury-goods conglomerate LVMH, it houses Arnault's substantial private collection, including pieces by Pierre Huyghe, Gerhard Richter, Thomas Schütte and Bertrand Lavier, among others. La Fondation Louis Vuitton also hosts extensive temporary exhibitions, like the mesmerizing light installations of Danish-Icelandic artist Olafur Eliasson.

Musée Picasso

This immensely popular museum rose phoenix-like in late 2014, when it finally reopened after an ambitious (and often controversial) five-year makeover that cost an estimated $58 million. Home to the world's largest public collection of Picasso's work, it now covers almost 54,000 square feet in two buildings: the regal 17th-century Hôtel Salé and a sprawling new structure in the back garden that's dedicated to temporary exhibitions.

Roger Goodell said Wednesday that he will not re-instate the Patriots' draft picks due to Deflategate. GETTY IMAGES

MY LETTER TO NFL COMMISH ROGER GOODELL

@dannypicard

Earlier this week, Patriots owner Robert Kraft revealed that he sent a letter to NFL commissioner Roger Goodell, requesting that the league give back their draft picks, which were part of the Deflategate punishment handed out nearly one year ago.

The NFL took away New England's first-round pick in 2016 and their fourth-round pick in 2017. With the Draft quickly approaching, that 2016 first-rounder is of the utmost importance. Hence, Kraft's letter to Goodell.

Since we learned about that letter, we've also learned that the Patriots will not be getting their draft picks back. At least, not the 2016 first rounder. That shouldn't come as a surprise, considering the Draft is just two months away.

Attack or applaud Kraft all you want for the way he's handled this situation. But one thing is for sure, Goodell has butchered the entire process from Day 1.

So I took a different approach with my letter to the NFL commissioner:

Roger,

With the 2016 NFL Draft quickly approaching, the reality of not having a first-round pick is starting to kick in. And while I understand how long these Deflategate appeals can take, I'm not here to waste anyone's time by continuing to ask for those picks back.

I'm writing to you because I feel you should take a look at something non-football related. During this 365-day schedule that is the NFL, I understand that can be tough to do. But please, entertain me for just a moment.

Last weekend, the NBA caught a player using an illegal substance on his hands during a game. That player was Houston Rockets center Dwight Howard on Saturday against the Atlanta Hawks. Before re-entering the game, Howard applied Stickum spray to his hands from a can covered in tape. When he checked in, he grabbed the ball from the official in between Atlanta forward Paul Millsap's two free throws. As Millsap received the ball for his second free throw, he immediately threw it back to the official, wondering why it was sticky.

NBA official Monty McCutchen also noticed the sticky substance on the ball, removed it from the game, and issued a warning to both teams, letting them know that Stickum is illegal in the NBA.

Roger, under your rules, tampering with game balls affects the integrity of the game. So I was curious to see how another league and another commissioner would respond to such an act, even if it didn't necessarily affect the result or create a competitive advantage. Because let's be honest, we both know that the air pressure in a football didn't have anything to do with the Patriots winning Super Bowl XLIX. That's already proven to be true. And when it comes to Stickum on a basketball, I'm not entirely sure how that has benefited Howard or the Rockets. Nonetheless, it's illegal in the NBA, and I think you should have a look as to how NBA commissioner Adam Silver handled this situation.

As a result of Howard's Stickum use, the Rockets received an "official warning" from the league office. Also, the NBA sent a memo to all 30 teams, reminding them of the rule that "strictly prohibits" Stickum on a player's hands during a game.

That's it. A warning and a leaguewide memo.

Now, I understand that hindsight is 20/20. But this isn't hindsight on my part. I have felt since the night of the AFC Championship game, over a year ago, that the NFL's response to Deflategate should have been similar to the type of response we're seeing now from the NBA, when it comes to Howard's Stickum.

If you continue to take a "what's done is done" approach with the draft picks and $1 million fine, then so be it. But as you continue to fight Judge Richard Berman's decision to nullify Tom Brady's four-game suspension, please consider how other leagues have handled similar situations.

Because at the end of the day, perhaps Commissioner Silver was the one to learn from your Deflategate mistakes. And there's still time for you to drop the gloves.

See you at Super Bowl LI.

Aries Adapt your plans and proceed with them. If you get in the right frame of mind, you will receive positive results. Assess a relationship if you feel the other party is withholding information.

Taurus Don't make an impulsive move if your emotions are calling the shots. Focus on what you do best and how to use your attributes to get ahead. Your persuasiveness is an asset.

Gemini Take part and reach out to help bring about positive change at home or in your community. Don't let uncertainty confuse you or stop you from doing your best.

Cancer Consider your options and move forward. Taking part in something that reunites you with old buddies or colleagues will lead to a window of opportunity.

Leo A day trip will motivate you to try something new. Do your part by contributing knowledge and solutions. A positive change at home will lighten the mood.

Virgo Your entertaining, fun-to-be-with attitude will draw attention. Focus on love, romance and socializing. Relationships will be enhanced and self-improvement projects will pay off.

Libra Expand your interests and friendships. What you learn from observing others will encourage you to be money smart. Do your best to complete contracts, settlements or legal issues.

Scorpio Recognize a problem and take action. Losing control of a personal situation will make it difficult to regain ground. Nurture what you have and eliminate what isn't working for you.

Sagittarius You should concentrate on your home. Personal changes will enhance your relationship with loved ones and friends, and position you for greater popularity and success.

Capricorn Don't give in to emotional instability. Stick close to home and take care of matters that will add to your personal security. Nurture important relationships.

Aquarius Observe how others respond to you. Protect your property and don't lend or borrow money or possessions. Look for professional opportunities that will increase your income.

Pisces Money matters must not be ignored. Overspending will lead to unnecessary stress. Back away from anyone asking for too much and offering too little. EUGENIA LAST
